Click

'Click, click, click' went the shears in the chaotic shearing shed. The shearers were shearing off the thick coats of the sheep. It seemed like a fundamental skill for the farmers, but being quick and slick took a skill that not all farmers had. It was fantastic to see these farmers working their magic, but there were also other animals to see on this farm. In the pond were fluffy baby chicks, and in the fields were slick black horses, cute baby calves, as well as many other classic farming animals. I wanted to stay and wander around this farm all day.

Mitch the Witch's Dog

There once lived a witch that liked to cook in her kitchen. She created different types of punch to drink as well as baking batches of vanilla cookies. The witch had a dog called Mitch. Mitch enjoyed it when the witch played fetch with him. He would catch the ball when the witch pitched it. One day, while Mitch was drinking the witch's punch and eating a cookie, he had an itch on his lips. Mitch scratched and twitched. He was very sore and struggled to catch his breath. Which Game?

Two friends wanted to play a game together but didn't know what to do. It wasn't an easy choice to make. Should they have a cricket match on the small patch of grass in the yard?

Should they compete to thatch or stitch a small carpet? That wouldn't be easy to do! Couldn't they clutch a ball and throw it at the latch to open the hutch? It's not easy to do that!

Whatever they decided to do would be fun because they were good friends. It wasn't often that they didn't have fun when they were together.

Lewis' Crew

When Lewis sails on his boat, he makes sure he has a great crew to help him. His crew can rescue him if he falls into the blue sea. A few of Lewis' crew are new. Most of them are great at answering his orders, but some are headstrong and don't take orders very well. There is one crew member who gets seasick and sometimes needs to spew! Ew!

After a big day on the water, Lewis and his crew enjoy a fresh brew with bread and stew and then play pool with new cues.

Painting Pictures

I've always wanted to paint a picture, but I'm just no good at art. One day, I listened to a podcast about the future of abstract art. It talked about using a mixture of things to create pictures, sculptures, or any art. I thought I might give it a go! I used some bits from nature, and my bike had a puncture, so I used the tube from the tyre. It was crazy and strange, but I used different fixtures to bring everything together in the end, and it worked out well.

My art had lots of texture, and I felt proud of the abstract artwork that I had created!

The Fair

The air is warm, the sun is out, and I am going to have the best day ever. It is the day of the fair! The fair comes around once a year, and everyone in our suburb usually goes. We do our hair, put on a pair of walking shoes, and head to the showgrounds for a great day. Today is that day! The best things about the fair for me is visiting the dairy (seeing the cows with their massive hooves), eating the fairy floss, and going for rides on the giant chair swing. I can't wait for this day to begin!

The Old Wild West

The Wild Old West is a time and a place in history. It was in the 1800s in the western states of the USA. This time is called the Wild Old West because of the wild stories from the times, some of which are true, but others may be fiction. There have been many movies made about these wild times. The stories and movies tell of the Wild Old West and are often about conflicts that happened between cowboys, outlaws, Native Americans (also known as American Indians), and explorers. These conflicts were often over land, livestock, water and gold!

Crazy Orange Monster

Yesterday, I saw a crazy orange monster in my drawer. It was as small as a pear and as orange as a freshly picked orange from the tree. The monster had four paws with sharp claws protruding from them. Those claws could hurt me. I was sure!

To be honest, I was very scared of the monster. It looked crazy, and it made my jaw shake with terror. That was until it spoke!

When I opened the drawer, the monster looked at me, and then it asked me if I liked skiing. What a crazy question! I answered, 'Sure, I enjoy skiing', and the monster seemed happy with that. So I pushed the drawer closed and went on with my day.

Gnome and Gnu

Gnome and Gnu were friends; in fact, they had been best friends for a long time. Even though they were very different in many ways, they liked the same things, and their interests were aligned. Gnome and Gnu were different in how they looked. Gnome was small and fictional, whereas Gnu was massive and real. One thing that Gnome and Gnu liked to do together was to design posters and signs. They were both very creative and even dreamed of one day designing a machine to help make their creations!

The three friends are currently working on aligning their design so the signs come out the correct length. It's a tricky process, but progress is being made. As work on aligning their design was taking place, they worked out that they were doing it all wrong! Knight knocked the table with delight when he finally worked it out!

"We need to wriggle this and realign that", he explained to the others. Gnome and Gnu ensured that Knight had written down what to do so they never got it wrong again!

Thieves in the Castle

The man blew a whistle when the machine suddenly came to a stop. The hustle and bustle of the factory had suddenly come to an end too. The workers, who were usually jostling with each other as they worked, all stood silently. They were wrestling with what they were looking at. Thieves had stolen the keys to the factory! The man was outraged because he was the boss and this factory was like his castle. The man blew his whistle three more times, just before the police appeared from the field of thistles. Would they find the thieves before it was too late?

Walter's Eighteen Mares

One day in early spring, Walter checked on the eighteen mares who were out among the trees in the yard. The mares had been neglected, so it was Walter's job to feed and look after them so that they would gain weight and be healthy again.

Walter was good at his job. He knew all of the mare's names and could tell their individual neighs. He took them for rides when they had gained enough weight and were ready for reins to be used. Walter always waited until he knew they were prepared; he never rushed the process. Walter was doing a great job feeding and looking after the mares in the yard. They were gaining weight and were becoming healthy. The day finally came when the mares were healthy enough to be sold and sent to owners all over the world. Walter had weighed each of the eighteen mares and knew they were ready. Well done, Walter!

"Yes, what do you want? I'm busy studying morphemes," replied Dolphin in two grumpy phrases.

"Ah! Morphology!" exclaimed The Phantom. "That's where you break words into their meaning parts, isn't it?"

"Yes!" said Dolphin, surprised. "How did you know?"

"Well," said The Phantom, "I've just been reading how phonemes are units of speech sound, graphemes are units of spelling, and morphemes are units of meaning!"

"That's very clever, Phantom, but I really must go because the Farting Cow has just arrived for morning tea," said Dolphin.

The Electrician

The electrician had to keep her composure while working around high-voltage live wires. Being an electrician brought her pleasure, but it could sometimes be dangerous work. Getting an electric shock would mean a visit to a physician if the shock didn't kill her. If an electric shock was fatal, it would be a visit to a mortician instead!

If that happened, some eager politician would call for laws to be changed about how electricians work in the hope that this would bring closure to the issue. I hope all electricians keep their composure so no one ends up at the mortician!
